The Surrender of Lee.

The Surrender of Lee.

Ballimore dispatch.

Col. Charles Marshall, chief of General Lee's staff, speaking of the surrender at Appomattox, and of the meeting of Gene. Grant and Lee, says: "When senhown into the room Gen. Grant advanced and shook hands with Gen. Lee. The Federal commander was in undress uniform and without sidearms, while Gen. Lee was in full uniform. Gen. Grant, by way of apology to Gen. Lee for coming without his sidearms, said that his sword was with his bagage, and because of his desire to reach the place for the conference he had hastened on in undress uniform. This was the only allusion to a sword that was made in the interview. After the terms of surrender were settled, Gen. Grant explained that he was advised that Gen. Lee's forces had a number of Federal prisoners, who, like their captors, were out of rations. Gen. Sheridan replied that he could supply 25,000 rations. Gen. Grant thee instructed him to send 25,000 rations to Gen. Lee's Commissary. After the interview, Gen. Lee asked for Gen. Williams, and thanked that officer for kindness shown to his son, Gen. Custis Lee, who had been captured several days before. When Gen. Lee and Col, Marshall is not sure that Gen. Grant was among them, for his thoughts were busy with other matters at the tume. front porch." Col. Marshall is not sure that Gen. Grant was among them, for his thoughts were busy with other matters at

A Mean Old General Bouted. Old "General Debility" has been put to Old "General Debillity" has been put to flight in Arkansas, with happy results. From Brinkley, from Webb City, and from Walnut Ridge, Messrs. P. R. Anderson, E. M. Taylor and F. S. Plnehbeek respectively, write that they were all afflicted with general debility, and received solid benefit from Brown's Iron Bitters. This is pleasant to know, not only for Arkansas people, but for all sections of the country where General Debility has counted victims by the thousand. For sale everywhere.
